Land Acknowledgement

I acknowledge that the land where we are standing, Phoenix, Arizona, now stands in the traditional territory of the O'odham Jewed, Akimel O'odham, and Hohokam people I recognized that these Indigenous people have been stewards of this land for centuries, nurturing its resources and sustaining their communities through a deep connection to the earth. I honor their enduring presence and resilience, and acknowledge the ongoing relationship between these Indigenous nations and this land. I pay my respects to their elders, past and present, and commit to learning from their histories and perspectives as I strive to be a responsible steward of this land for future generations.

Labor Acknowledgement

- I acknowledge the labor of Black & African-American people—ancestors and descendants. I recognize that the United States' and global economies historically and currently rest on the ingenuity, cultural treasures and stolen labor of African-Americans and Black people throughout the diaspora.
- I honor the brilliance and humanity of all immigrant labor, including voluntary, involuntary, trafficked, forced, and undocumented peoples who contributed to the building of the country and continue to serve within our labor force. And express my heartfelt gratitude for their infinite contributions.

Labor Acknowledgement

By recognizing the land that was taken from First Americans and the forced labor that was provided by enslaved Africans and black & brown people, we strive to take steps towards creating a more equitable and just world for all of us.
