

Caitlin Synovec, OTD, OTR/L, BCMH
Assistant Director of Medical Respite
National Institute for Medical Respite Care (NIMRC), a special program of the National Healthcare for the Homeless Council (NHCHC)

Caitlin Synovec, OTD, OTR/L is an occupational therapist with clinical experience in working with adults experiencing homelessness to improve quality of life and engagement in their preferred communities. Caitlin's experience includes program development for collaborative and interdisciplinary care, as well as clinical education and training for health care and direct service providers. Her work seeks to address the intersection of homelessness, poverty, traumatic brain injury, mental health, and chronic conditions, and their impact on health and community living. Most recently, she has joined the National Health Care for the Homeless Council as the Assistant Director of Medical Respite to support expansion and best practices in medical respite care.
